This section is optional and can be used to provide a summary of recommendations to the IT manager regarding which controls and/or compliance best practices Botium Toys needs to implement, based on the risk posed if not implemented in a timely manner.

Recommendations (optional):

Several controls should be put in place to ensure that data is confidential and free from unauthorised access either from third-party vendors, insider threats or even disgruntled employees. Private data such as pii and spii should be kept safe and accessible to authorised users in the organisation. Which means that employees should be given enough information in line with what they are working with (the principle of least privilege access). Additionally, no single individual should have control of critical processes. Different sections of the organisation should be informed of critical processes before approval can take place (principle of separation of duties).

Also, proper security measures should be put in place such as complex or strict password policies that would involve the use of special characters, words and alphabets. This would reduce the likelihood of a brute-force attack. The use of intrusion detection systems (IDS) should also be introduced so as to let the organisation be informed of a threat actor trying to gain unauthorized access to the company's private data.

In conclusion, backups of sensitive data should be made and avoid the likelihood of data loss. And strong intervention should be made in the cases of legacy systems being compromised.
